

Sharing the Story of the British Home Children

Raising awareness about the British Home Children is something each of us can do—often in simple, everyday ways. Every conversation, every book, and every connection helps ensure these children are never forgotten.

Everyday Actions That Make a Difference

- Donate with purpose: If you donate used BHC books to charity, slip a bookmark inside with a short note about the British Home Children and a link to the Home Children Canada website.
- Support your local library: Learn how to suggest books and recommend titles on the British Home Children. Be prepared to explain why these stories matter and deserve a place on their shelves.
- Borrow and review: Sign out BHC books from your library. Many libraries track circulation and reader reviews—both help signal demand and encourage libraries to carry more titles.
- Start conversations: Wear your British Home Child pin when you're out. People will ask—and that's your opportunity to share the story. Keep a few business cards handy with links for those who want to learn more.

Bringing the Story to Your Community

One of the most powerful ways to educate others is through presentations and talks.

- ♥ Probus Clubs
- ♥ Historical Societies
- ♥ Community groups
-  Genealogical Societies
-  Libraries
-  Community groups

- ✓ If there is a speaker in your area, we can arrange an in-person presentation
- ✓ If not, we are happy to offer Zoom presentations, making it accessible anywhere

Why It Matters

The story of the British Home Children is not just history—it is part of the foundation of Canada. By sharing it, you help ensure that the experiences of over 100,000 children are recognized, understood, and remembered.